NEW DRYDOCK PLAN DECIDED

than was at first figured on, it will be necessary to deepen the basin, and on account of the piles which are already in place, ordinary dredging can not be done. In all probability a water jet and suction pipe will be used to get the additional depth.

No Delays
Asked as to the probable delay in completion of the drydock, due to the last accident and change of method of construction, Civil Engineer Gayler said:

"There should be no delay, and the dock should be completed by June, 1915. By the method we have been following, the speed of construction has been limited by the ability of the divers to set the under water forms, or pockets, into which the tremies have been emptying concrete, and this has been necessarily slow. By the new method, the recessed blocks themselves form the pockets, and the complicated timbering is done away with. We should be able to work much faster than has been the case, and I figure that the dock should be completed on schedule time."

Civil Engineer Gayler does not think that the change of method will add greatly to the cost of the big basin.
"I can give out no definite figures at the present time," said he, "but can say that I do not think there will be much added expense. In many ways the new plan is more economical. This will all be decided by a board of engineers which will meet in Washington, and will decide the excess of compensation for the contractors, as has been done before when the original construction plan has been changed or modified. The government and contractors have always come together on a figure satisfactory to both, and precedent leads us to suppose that the same will be true in this case."

"As to any alarming discoveries of mud pockets in the bottom, al-legal to have been made by divers since the accident, there is really nothing to them," continued Mr. Gayler. "We knew bottom conditions before the trouble last week, and of course an upheaval of the bottom like the one which occurred, might be expected to dislodge some of the earth fill and create other disturbance. The divers have discovered nothing to show that a drydock can not be built on the previous site."

Contractors Waiting

"Drydock" Smith, engineer and superintendent on the job for the San Francisco Bridge Co., contractor, has not gone carefully into the new plan for building the dock, according to Civil Engineer Gayler. Mr. Smith has been up to his eyes in the work of clearing away the wreckage, and undoing the damage that has been done, and has not gone into the matter of future plans. The final say of construction methods lies with the navy engineers, and it is likely that any plan which they work out will receive the approval of the men who are doing the actual work.

Admiral Cowles, it is understood, approves of the latest plan, and as the commandant is a practical engineer himself, his O. K. has considerable weight.
President Hines, of the San Francisco Bridge Co., is a passenger on the Nippon Maru, expected tomorrow morning from San Francisco, and when he has had a look at the drydock wreck he may have something to say about the future plans of the company. The belief is that the company will stick to the job, and that in spite of setbacks and obstacles the drydock will be successfully completed.

BABE UNHURT; MURDER-SUICIDE

showed that it had never been used until employed in its deadly mission this morning.

Information gathered from a number of Japanese residing in the neighborhood, the police officers succeeded in piecing together a story to the effect that Shimaza, who follows the trade of gardener, has not been living with his wife for some weeks. He is said to have treated her very cruelly, and frequently was prevented from leaving her. The man is said to have come in from Kaimuki this morning, and, entering the house, began to abuse the woman, who once or twice endeavored to leave the house.

Six Shots Are Fired.
Shimaza then locked the door to prevent the escape of the woman who was then seeking a divorce. Perhaps a half hour was spent in loud and angry words, when the neighborhood was startled by the rapid firing of the gun.

Some minutes later Mounted Patrolman Kramer, in passing along the Maialae road, was attracted to the scene through the excited actions of the people and broke open the door leading into the main room of the dwelling.

Lying on the mat covered floor within three feet of each other were the man and the woman. The crying and thoroughly frightened child, with marks of blackened powder on its face and body, was removed, and Kramer sent in a call for the police.

Four shots were fired at the woman, all taking effect. An examination showed one shot entering the body over the right breast, one in the middle of the back, another in the right shoulder and the fourth piercing the left lung. The revolver had been held so close to the body that the flames of exploding powder had scorched large patches on the kimono worn by the woman.

Turning the gun upon himself, Shimaza fired one shot taking effect in the stomach and bowels and the second and last just over the heart, the latter doubtless causing instant death.

Coroner Charles Rose was notified and appeared on the scene to take charge of the remains, and secure witnesses to the tragedy.

The interior of the premises bore unmistakable evidence of a struggle. Littering was scattered about one of the rooms in the wildest confusion. The police are inclined to the theory that the men came upon the woman at a time when she was nursing her baby, the position of the dead mother and her unharmed infant indicating that such may have been the case.

Gun Reloaded Before Suicide.
The gun used in the killing of the woman had been reloaded by Shimaza before he used the weapon with deadly effect upon himself. In an adjoining room was found five shells, three having been exploded. In the gun picked up on the floor within a few inches of the dead man's right hand were found three empty cartridges.

In going through the pockets of Shimaza the police found a dozen or more loaded brass cartridges, a receipt from Lightfoot & Lightfoot, attorneys, acknowledging payment of $75 for services rendered which, in this particular instance, was a fee for instituting divorce proceedings in two territorial courts.

A certificate of registry for the revolver was also recovered.

AGED WOMAN WILL APPEAR AS WITNESS

The oldest witness in the record of the circuit court will appear in Judge Robinson's division when a Hawaiian woman known by the name of Mamala, upon whom a subpoena to appear was issued today, comes in from Keaau to give testimony in the appealed land case of Territory of Hawaii vs. L. L. McCandless. Mamala misses the century mark by only one year, having just celebrated her ninety-ninth birthday. It is said that, notwithstanding her great age, her mind is as clear as a bell. She is reported to be the only person living who has a vivid recollection of a surveyor by the name of Bishop surveying the disputed property under the original title. It is reported that, when the jury in the case went out to Keaau a day or two ago to inspect the property, the jurymen were astounded at the keen wit and wonderful memory of the old woman.

In Judge Robinson's court this morning, Amelio Prudente plead guilty to the charge of having carnally abused a female child under sixteen years of age. Upon Prudente's own plea, the court appointed George A. Davis to defend the plaintiff.

Yip Chai pleaded not guilty to a charge of assault and battery, it being alleged that he attacked Wong Duck with a weapon obviously and immunitably dangerous to life.
